Along with winning comes some losing, disappointing not only to the players and fans but also to the Warrior Mascot Todd Shanebrook.

The "hick school" became a label that many resented and others tried to ignore; however, the name just didn't seem to fit.

Notable academic achievements, award winning spirit, runner up in A.C.A.C. basketball, and speech team championships (the list is endless) were all accomplished by students of a "small time" school.

Suddenly larger schools were aware of the Woodlan name. Greater "school awareness" bonded the students, creating expanded pride, spirit and attitude toward school activities. This change in the attitude and feeling for the school made it inevitable that finally we were "BREAKING THROUGH."

For the second time in its history the cheerleaders and fans receive the ACAC Sportsmanship Award.

Wasting Precious Time ?

Heels clicking vigorously toward the lobby, radios blaring their "music," lockers slamming, discussions covering numerous topics such as-What's on the government test?-Is she really going out with him?-and-What are you doing after the game?, posters filling the walls giving expressions from "Rip Em Up, Tear Em Up, Give Em !#*+*! Warriors," to "A.C.A.C. here we come, Woodlan Warriors, #1," were experienced as only part of a trek down a lonely hall. And it's been said that walking from class to class is a waste of time!

When Jay Vestal told Dennis Severence to "go climb a tree," he never thought he'd take him literally.

It's the "new look" for Mr. Howard Baulkey who patrols the lunch room incognito.

Hostages Fly To Freedom In Algiers

As Reagan Becomes 40th President

By United Press International

Iran freed the 52 American hostages today on the 44th day of captivity in exchange for return of its $8 billion in frozen assets.

The move gave Jimmy Carter a dramatic victory in the closing minutes of his presidency.

The liberated captives flew from the Moslem nation just after nightfall aboard two Algerian 727 aircraft.

Word of the release came at 11:35 a.m. EST by telephone to London from Tehran airport officials at the end of day of non-stop negotiations in four capitals involving bankers and government officials in the largest financial transaction in history.

Reagan Praises Carter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A calm, but excited President Reagan today praised the release of the 52 American hostages held in Iran, calling it a dramatic victory for Jimmy Carter.

Reagan, who was in the White House when Carter was elected, said the hostages' return was a triumph for the American people and a testament to the strength of the American spirit.

He said he was proud to have served with Carter and to have seen the hostages' return.

Reagan said he would be in the White House when Carter was sworn in as president on Jan. 20.

Nation Experiences Breakthrough

"Free at Last" proved to be a feeling that many Americans felt as Iran finally released the 52 hostages.

Newly elected President Ronald Reagan, immediately following the taking of the oath of office, was informed of the news and quickly prepared for their return.

After 444 days of captivity these brave souls were brought to Washington and treated to the best "welcome home" the United States could muster.

The celebration was not limited to D.C. The trees surrounding the front drive way were tied in yellow, and on the National Day of Thanksgiving, (declared by Reagan), the German Club circulated yellow ribbons for the students and faculty to wear.

These contributions to the celebration made Woodlan feel just a little bit closer to the "real world."

Student Life

Change became a way of life for many students with the modification of several "irreversible" rules.

For the first time the "Juicy Fruit" did not have to be hidden between the "cheek and gum" when teachers passed. Many times they were chewing too.

The privileges did not stop with gum. Six inches between people in the halls was forgotten after the upheaval of students against the "hand holding rule." The administration decided to lift the rule and allowed those of the "opposite sex" to communicate not just by talking but also by holding hands.

These privileges made the atmosphere much more relaxed and helped to give a feeling of peace throughout the school.

"Revolting against tradition, 'Punk Rock' hit its peak."

Alligator and fox shirts were handsomely displayed as designer clothes hit the halls.

Indiana leads the nation in drawing fans to basketball games. Warpaint has become a way in which Warriors support their teams.

FEATURE : FADS

1980 was a year for bringing back the fad. Some were fun some were daring and some were just plain bad. We paraded around in "Gloria Vanderbilt" and "Calvin Klein," Orson Wells told us not to drink "wine before it's time." Every city slicker became an "Urban Cowboy" Mechanical horses were elected the latest toy. AC-DC was "Back in Black," and "Shook Us All Night Long." Kenny Rogers made the charts with "Lady" his hit song. Disco started on its way out, and "New Wave" became a must. But rock-and-roll was still going strong with "Another One Bites the Dust."

At the flicks, horror films made it big
All we wanted was blood, guts, and one more grave to dig.
Everyone's fantasy was to become a perfect "10"
We braided our hair, drank "Perrier," and took up jogging again.
We forgot about Farrah Fawcett who we once used to adore
Now everyone loves Miss Piggy, America's favorite boar.
Just when we began to think earth was one big place
People decided to take a cosmic trip to space.
"Space Invaders," "Star Trek," and "Star Wars" hit the scene
The "Empire Strikes Back" with, what else, a laser beam.
Revolting against tradition, "Punk Rock" hit its peak
With purple hair, leather pants, and safety pins in their cheek.
And every Friday night on "Dallas" we watched to see which star,
Could answer the age old question of "Who shot old J.R."
Some things people said when they were feeling especially daring,
Were "What a Trip," "That's Cosmic," and "Thanks for Sharing."
So if you hate the Muppets, and Cowboy boots, never fear,
Just wait for another fad to come around next year.

Warriors Dim Knights' Lights

Active, excited competition between classes highlighted Homecoming Week to the theme "Knock Out the Lights of the Norwell Knights." Over 50% of the school personnel participated in the various activities which had been pre-chosen by the students. The "uniforms of the days" were:

Monday: Blue and White Day

Tuesday: Sweatshirts and Stuffed Animal Day

Wednesday: Hats, Socks and Shades Day

Thursday: Dress Down Day

Friday: Dress Up Day

Excitement mounted as students filed into the gym for the Friday afternoon pep session, featuring "Mssster Woodlan Homecoming." All this enthusiasm and student participation boosted the morale of the team as they plunged into a well-fought battle against Norwell.

In the first quarter of the game, it was evident that it was going to be a rough game. The Knights held 8th place in the state; however, the Warriors' determination to score over-came even the slightest thought of being intimidated. They ended the game with a 26-12 score.

During the halftime activities, Denise Myers was crowned Homecoming Queen, and the sophomore class won the float competition. Featuring the band "Dream," the dance following the game helped round out an active and successful Homecoming Week.

Final Vote Cast After 25 Years

The Presidential election intensified the 25th annual mock election. AC DC, ACE, TOGA, KEG, and MAGIC symbolized Mr. Briegel's five government classes that campaigned for top offices.

Preparation for the event began three weeks prior to the election day. Each day proved to be more exciting and competitive. When November 4th finally arrived, everyone anticipated the announcement of the winners.

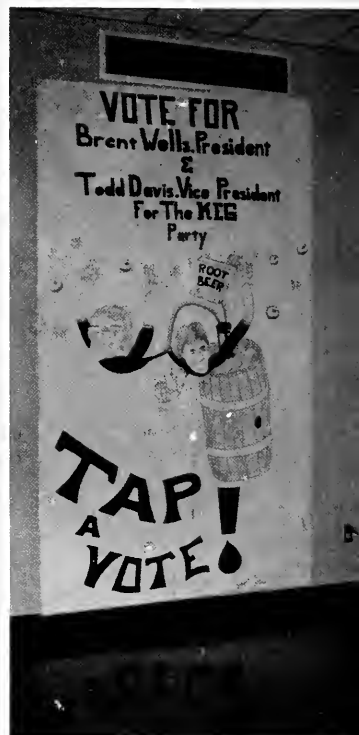

As quickly as the enthusiasm had risen; it died. By 3:15 on election day candidates had torn down posters and taken off buttons ... mock elections had ended ... for the last time.

Mocking the TOGA party, AC DC asks the question: "Romans really wore these things?"

Pep Sessions Provide Popular Change

Unlike past years, pep sessions this year had an added twist. During football season, the "Mssster Homecoming" contest entertained the students. Following the structure of the "typical" beauty contest, evening gowns and swimsuits were modeled by "brawny" football players. The talent phase featured Mark Pusey doing a "boogie" with modern dance and Steve Frecker singing an aria from TOSCA. Brent Wells twirled his baton into the hearts of the judges while Todd Davis showed his ballet talents, and Scott Thompson "shook his stuff" to the "Hawaiian War Chant."

Later in the year the Student Council provided the first hour long pep session called the "Basketball Feud." The arch rivals, the Leo Lions, headed by "Dingy Daddy" (Mark Pusey), got off to a great beginning when they answered the first question correctly. The success was short lived when the Warriors took over with Coach Martin (Sheryl Engle) leading the way.

In the past, pep sessions were a routine mixture of cheers and introductions, sprinkled with an occasional dash of pep.

This year with changes in the format and content of the pep sessions, students "broke through" with new and creative activities which aroused school spirit.

"As Time Goes On"

Prom King Devin Anderson and Queen Anita Huff pose their royal bodies for their coronation photograph.

"As Time Goes On," memories of the Junior-Senior Prom will remain. The summer sun and the evening breeze provided the perfect setting for the elegant occasion. Approximately 270 students and faculty members gathered at the Lantern to create a memorable evening.

Dinner consisted of New York strip steak, baked potato, corn, tossed salad, and a variety of cakes. Following the dinner, junior class president Anita Huff welcomed the guests. Maintaining the tradition of giving joke awards to the seniors, Devin Anderson presented the "coveted" honors. Todd Davis walked away with the two most notorious awards — Most Conceited and Class Flirt; Kim Bearman received Most Conceited for the girls, and Alicia Walko was voted Class Flirt. Kurt Bremer and Laura Stutaman were named Biggest Penny Pinchers. Terry Bush was awarded two prestigious awards — Most Likely to Succeed and Most Studious; Kathy Mull and Lyn Rowell also received these awards respectively. Todd Shanebrook and Vickee Bergman were voted as the two who showed the Most School Spirit, while Mark Pusey and Vicky Nicole were honored as the two with the Most Pleasing Personalities. Renae Keifer and cowboy-clothed Jeff Hensely were named as the Class Clowns, and David Petry and Jeanette Quinn were embarrassed to find they had been named the two who Blush Most Easily.

During the intermission, students posed for keepsake pictures taken by Watters Studio. During the coronation ceremony, former king and queen Brent Wells and Gina Hans crowned Devin Anderson and Anita Huff as the new prom king and queen. Pan Arnos and Mark Anderson were named first runners-up; Rick Gerig and Teri Gerig were second runners-up; and Jeff Berning and Fay Yoder were third runners-up. The newly elected royalty danced to the music played by Swango.

When the sun had set and the night had grown cooler, the long awaited prom ended, and "As Time Goes On," the memories of that night will live in each person's mind forever.

Outstanding Achievements Recognized

Grover Cleveland once said, "Honor lies in honest toil." Many high school students were honored at the annual Honor Night for their hard work and accomplishments in the areas of academics and for outstanding extra-curricular performances.

Lyn Rowell and Cindy Clark were presented as valedictorian and salutatorian respectively; Laura Stutzman received the citizenship award; and Brent Wells was the only senior who was honored with a senior blanket.

Honor Night was very successful. Over 500 people turned out for the event, and with the organizational skills of the student Council it ran smoothly.

During the day junior high students were honored for their achievements. Many students received awards to be proud of. One such award was given to Mike Fuelling for becoming a finalist in a national art competition.

Mr. Keith Greathouse honors Robin McConnell for being the only senior who achieved all A's throughout the entire year.

Runners: Mike Faith, Rick Harris, Roger Baumler, Trina Chapman, Tim Tracey, and

Neal Lenacher are presented by Mr. Steven Holt as the cross country team.

Individual members of the boys track team broke many school records during their season. The letter winners consisted of Mitch Armbruster, Kevin Swartz, Kent Hoffman, Gary Vondran, Devin Anderson, Todd Davis, and Craig Bontrager.

The National Honor Society golden chord is awarded yearly to graduating members. Becky Brittingham witnesses as Terry

Bush is presented as part of this prestigious group.

A certificate for being on the all A honor roll was just one of the many awards given to Cathy Crestinger during Junior High Honor Day.

Receiving medallions for straight A's is quite an honor for Teresa Wahl, Krista Cook, Jackie Lomont, and Randy Doctor

We Know What We Are, But Know Not What We May Be

Salutatorian — Cindy Clark; Valedictorian
— Lyn Rowell

On May 21, 1981, the senior class met as one for the final time before going out into the world in their separate ways.

Promptly at 7:30 p.m., the seniors took the short walk up the aisle that would turn them out into the world as young adults.

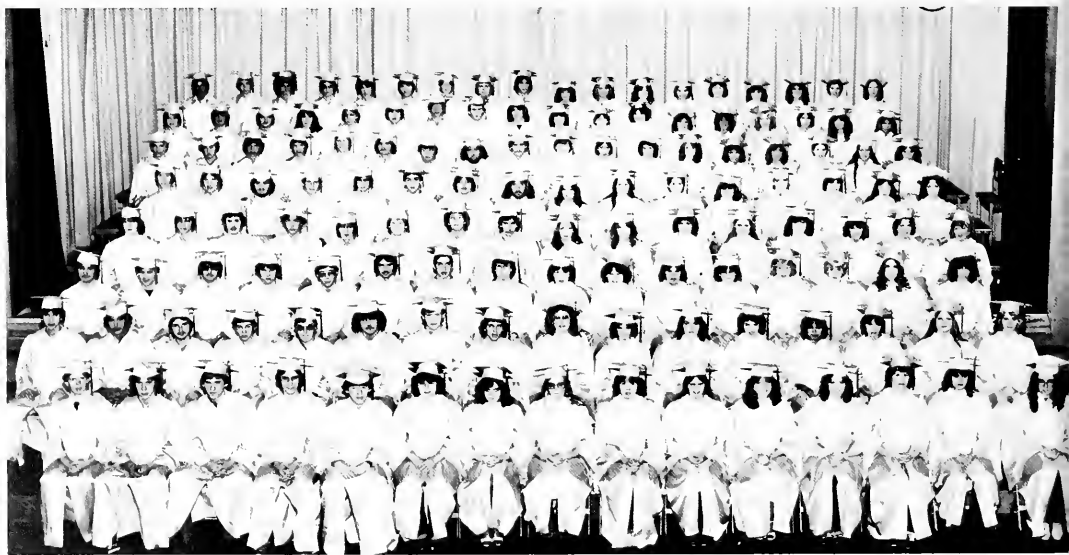

The Reverend Lynn Soughan gave the Baccalaureate address, and Dr. Otis Bowen was the honored guest who gave the commencement address. Salutatorian Cindy Clark expanded on the theme, "WE KNOW WHAT WE ARE, BUT KNOW NOT WHAT WE MAY BE," and Valedictorian Lyn Rowell gave her speech on growing up and living in Christ. Mr. Dewayne Heckley and Mr. Jerry Bush presented the Class of "81" with the diplomas that declared them official graduates.

The class chose royal blue, light blue, and white as class colors and a white silk rose as the class flower. "WE KNOW WHAT WE ARE, BUT KNOW NOT WHAT WE MAY BE" was chosen as the motto, in hopes that the members of the Class of "81" would be everything that they wanted to be.

We know what we are, but know not what we may be. We have our entire lives ahead of us. Please Lord, we ask you to keep an eye out for us and to guide us through the rough times. We know there will be some. Help us to live to the fullest, and help us to see things and be able to understand and accept things which we cannot control. Help us to help other people in the way that we would help ourselves, and above all Lord, we ask you for the power to love and care for our fellow man, and to love you with all our hearts.

Magic/Mystery Possess Productions

With the stage darkened, the actors ready, and the audiences waiting, the casts of the drama productions realized the late, late nights of rehearsals were worth the effort and energy expended. The moment to show off acting, singing and dancing talents had come. There was no turning back; it was time "to break a leg."

The fall dramatic production, THE CRUCIBLE by Arthur Miller, focussed historically on the 17th C. Salem witch trials. Each of the characters in the play came to life through the apt portrayals by students.

Directed by Louise Jones with help from student director, Kristi Miller-THE CRUCIBLE enabled students to experience the demands and rewards of performing a heavy, historical drama.

No less demanding or rewarding — the spring production of PIPPIN required actors to don dance shoes and dance clothes and beat, twist and pound muscles in to shape in order to perform intricate dance numbers.

PIPPIN was produced with the combined efforts of four people: Louise Jones, drama; Joan Phillips, music; Kelley Pierce, dance; Dean Ray, technical. Among them they transformed the gym into a theatre complete with special effects, "glitz" and actors committed to creating an evening of magic for the audiences. PIPPIN dazzled the crowd with fantastic costumes and outrageous make-up, and the company "wowed" audiences with their talent.

With "Magic to Do" the outlandish dance company emerged through the darkness of the stage with glowing fascination— gaudy, accomplished yet sensitive in their portrayals of the characters.

PIPPIN deals with one man's search for identity and meaning in life. After sampling all of life (the highs and the lows), Pippin discovers the essence of life sometimes is found in our own backyards.

PIPPIN was a courageous undertaking — a difficult and complex musical to produce. The glamour and glitter of costumes, sets and actors shone during performances because of love, talent and a huge amount of hard work.

While Rebecca Nurse (Kathy Mull) and Abigail Williams (Marcia Rosene) contemplate the disturbing possibility of witchcraft, Betty Parris (Wendy Miller) lies afflicted by these supernatural powers.

The courtroom members are stunned as Abigail (Marcia Rosene) leads them to believe that the spirit of a witch is in their presence.

Deciding that war is not the place to find life's fulfillment, Pippin (Kyle Farmer) wishes he could take back the life of the soldier (Tami Von Gunten) that he has slain.

As dead bodies clutter the battlefield, Charlemagne (Jon Gerardot) and his followers proclaim their victory

As Berthe (Lynn Engle), Pippin's grandmother, tells him to relax and enjoy life, she enjoys a little "frolicking" herself

Theme Songs Enhance Performances

What does a rose, a gypsy, and a patent leather sneaker have in common? As theme songs for the year the swing choir entertained with "The Rose," "I Can See It All," and "The Old Soft Shoe," throughout their performances.

The swing choir, made up of 25 members, grew in size and also in capabilities. Not only participating in Christmas and Spring programs, the swing choir joined six other choirs at the Northrop Swing Choir Spectacular finding themselves critiqued by Walter Lamble from Glenview, Illinois, and in the evening performing in front of 535 people.

The swing choir practiced at 7:00 in the morning Monday through Thursday each week. Practice was a time for learning songs, dancing, and growing closer to other members.

Not only did they have a rose, a gypsy, and a patent leather sneaker in common, but they also had comraderie.

While others are just awakening, Bill Brown, Steve Swing, and Kyle Farmer are practicing their "Old Black Magic."

Ready to "go on" at the Starshine Review, the swing choir prepares to do "The Old Soft Shoe."

Separately dancing and singing seem easy, but together it's a whole new story, as Jeff McKinley shows how to master it.

With "Magic To Do," Kim Bearman, Marcia Rosene, and Steve Swing ask the audience to "join us."

Confusion is not the word for it, as Kathy Mull, Sheryl Engle, Tami VonGuten, and Janet Gevers concentrate on musical dynamics.

FEATURE: No money...no fun

Today a person can hardly "afford" to live. Inflation has decreased the buying power of all Americans. Webster defines inflation as an increase in the amount of money in circulation, resulting in a relatively sharp and sudden fall in its value coupled with a rise in prices.

All kinds of prices are rising rapidly such as gas prices which continue to rise approaching $2.00 per gallon. We have been warned to slow down on the highways, drive conservatively and use car pools, yet Americans continue to drive single cars. Rising gas prices didn't stop people from travelling some distance for entertainment.

Teenagers really couldn't do anything without spending "the bucks." Going to movies, pizza parlors, rollerskating rinks, basketball games, football games, bowling alleys and the arcades were the principle forms of entertainment for teenagers.

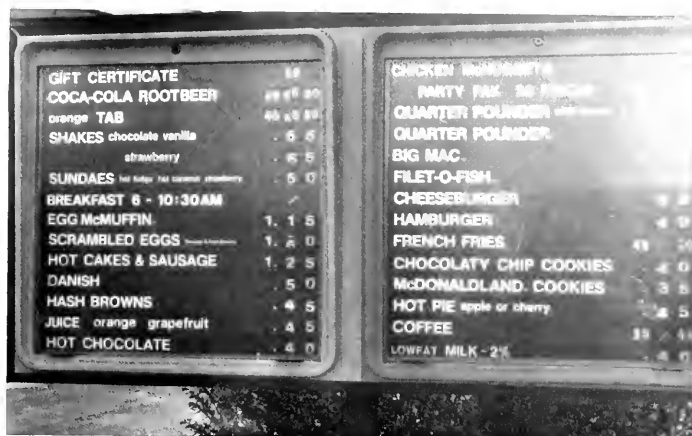

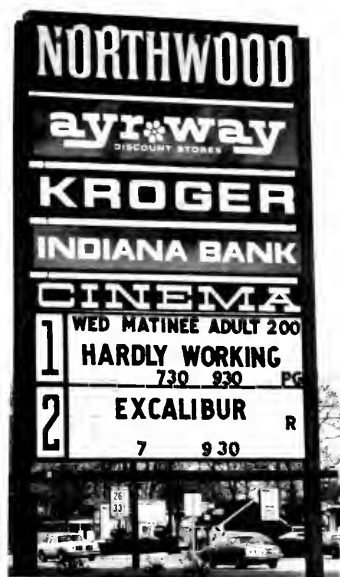

David Dinglefork's plight typified the economic situation for teenagers in 1981. Dinglefork was an active member of his marching band at Dudley High School. Winning the band fund raising sale by selling the most Cracker Jack, Dinglefork acquired a $100.00 prize. Finally he had enough money to ask Suzie Stuckup for a date — something he dreamed about all year.

The big night arrived and David was ready. He wore his brand new $30.00 Calvin Kleins and new $30.00 Izod sweater which left $40.00 for one single night "of paradise." Suzie decided that a quiet dinner for two at Mountain Jacks and then a quiet, romantic movie would be just splendid. David figured two movie tickets at $3.75 a piece would be $7.50, and two Mountain Jack dinners would cost between $20.00 and $25.00 which he could easily cover. No . . . No! First he had to fill his gas tank up which cost $15.00 and left only $25.00 for the evening. How could he tell Suzie that he couldn't take her to a movie and dinner both? What a dilemma!

Amazingly Miss Stuckup took the news very well telling Dinglefork that spending money wasn't the only way to have a good time, and she'd rather see a movie than eat out anytime.

The days of the "night on the town" had passed. People had to make choices about what form of entertainment to choose.

Experience Gives Better Blend

After a year's experience with the mixed chorus and the girls' glee under her belt, choral director Mrs. Joan Phillips developed two harmonious choirs.

The mixed chorus sang for various churches at Christmastime with the cantata "For God So Loved ..." This cantata was basically a combination of some favorite Christmas carols in a joyful combination glorifying Christ's name. The mixed chorus also sang for the Golden Years Nursing Home, as well as for many other concerts.

The girls' glee, made up of ninth and tenth grade girls, also pleased many people with their music. They sang for various concerts during the Christmas season and in the spring.

Both choirs consisted of people who enjoyed singing and who enjoyed making people happy through the magic of music and song.

Music: More Than Keeping Time

Junior High Choir was very active. They participated in the Winter and Spring Concerts, the Senior Citizen's Dinner at Christmas, the NISBOVA contest, and a Junior High Choral Festival in the spring which included all East Allen's Junior High Choirs.

Mrs. Phillips expressed how nice it was to have an "enthusiastic" choir and an especially fine baritone section of 13 guys.

The Junior High Band was also very spirited. They played at the Winter and Spring Concerts, NISBOVA, and the Carroll basketball game.

Mr. Taylor commented "The band was made up of 2/3 guys which is unusual," and, he continued, "The band as a whole was better than an average junior high band."

In the NISBOVA contest, each person competed against himself for a superior rating. Some students who received superior ratings in Fort Wayne were eligible to perform at the state level in Indianapolis.

Rhythm Raises Spirit

Many elements were involved in the rise of spirit within the student body. One of these elements was the Warrior band. Sitting in the stands for both football and basketball seasons, the band played rowdy, spirit-raising songs which engulfed everyone in the excitement of the games.

Directed by Mr. Ted Taylor the band worked in close association with the drill squad which was sponsored by Mrs. Debbie Roth. All through the summer, both groups worked hard in preparation for the many upcoming summer parades. The Warriorettes "strutted their stuff" with the band following close behind to the tune of "Breakthrough" for the Woodburn Days, Harlan Days, and Three Rivers Festival parades. During the football and basketball seasons, half-time entertainment was provided by the band and drill squad with flag, pom pon, dance and marching routines to such music as "A Chorus Line," "Dim All the Lights," and "Hot Stuff." the JV drill squad also performed for various half times of varsity basketball games. The girls performed to the music of "Vegas," "Peg," and "Wade in the Water" which was performed with the varsity drill squad.

Both groups sold "Polynesian Tan" suntanning products in order to raise money to provide a summer band camp program. In addition, the drill squad sold M & M's to raise money to attend the Fred J. Miller camp, designed especially for drill teams. The Warriorettes attended the Defiance, Ohio Fred J. clinic in July and returned with many ribbons and honors won in competition.

Even though the drill squad began the season with twenty members, for various reasons seven girls had to drop out, leaving the Warriorettes with a thirteen member squad. This gave the girls the chance to prove that quality outweighs quantity.

In addition to the marching band, members also were active in a concert band and a pep band. The pep band consisted of only a minority of the marching and concert band members, and they provided music for pep sessions throughout the year. The concert band gave Christmas and Spring concerts and also attended NISBOVA contest at West Noble where they received a second place rating.

All band and drill squad members practiced long and hard to give a good show, and they proved that a good performance is essential.

Clubs

Like standing on one side of a glass window, looking at possible experiences, clubs gave students a chance to "BREAK THROUGH" and learn skills that could later be used.

These skills were developed through clubs ranging from the medical careers club to the drama club, helping in the development of hobbies as well as occupational knowledge.

These experiences were not limited to the surrounding area however. Travel became commonplace, as the ski club found the Colorado mountains and the Spanish club, Mexico.

Through differing methods of gathering experience and skill, clubs became an important asset in many students' lives.

Sport/Spirit Coordinate Efforts

Recreation and exercise motivated students to take part in the Intramurals Club. Mr. Gay Martin and Mrs. Norma Gilbert helped these students learn about such sports as volleyball, dodgeball, and soccer.

The Sportsman Club, sponsored by Mr. Dennis Miesle and Mr. Tom Harris, allowed students to participate and learn about outdoor sports such as hunting, snowmobiling, and fishing.

Sponsored by Mr. Don Myers, the Spirit Club devoted one hour a month to designing and painting colorful posters to excite the student body and athletic teams. All high school cheerleaders were required to participate in this club, and anyone else who wished to join were welcomed.

Students Practice Leadership Skills

The chosen members of the Student Council vigorously participated in many activities. Directed by Student Council President Cindy Clark, members planned Homecoming and Spirit Week. For funding they sold cheese with a $1147.90 total profit. With that money they held a dinner for senior citizens and a Valentine's dance with free refreshments.

NHS stands for National Honor Society. Juniors and Seniors were chosen by the staff members on the basis of character, scholarship, leadership, and service. In order to be chosen each of the students had to maintain a B or better grade average.

Both organizations proved that leadership and scholarship are two big steps to becoming a better person. Individual growth was the most important thing gained by all members.

FHA/FFA Strive For The Future

The 1980-81 Future Homemakers of America was 160 members strong. Sponsors for the F.H.A. were Mrs. Shirley Deetz and Mrs. Julia Wilson. The Future Farmers of America was sponsored by Mr. Donald Hefty and Mr. Richard Grubaugh.

Members of both clubs were very active and participated in many activities. FHA'ers accompanied their dads on "Daddy Date Nite," blessed their mothers with roses at the "Rose Banquet," held Easter egg hunts, and muddled through candy sales. FFA'ers attended the "Spring Awards Banquet," and the chili supper. They built an "energy wagon" and held a "consignment auction." Although these were important and fun, Mark Pusey boasted that the fruit and seed sales were the most popular ever.

In the spring, officers from both clubs attended state leadership conferences. They met new friends and brought back many fresh ideas for the following year. Those things helped them strive "Towards New Horizons;" and by "Learning to learn; Earning to live; Living to serve;" they strived for the future.

Mr. Don Grubaugh works industriously with F.F.A. officers Jon Koeneman and Mark Pusey.

Stars Shine In Drama/Speech

The season was filled with successes for the Drama Club and Speech Team. It was a year for initiating new ideas and setting new records.

The Drama Club's top priority was the production of a variety show, Starshine Review '81. Twelve students performed various acts for a chance to win in one of the five categories. The winner of the Best Dance was Pam Arnos; Kim Hatcher received Best Vocalist; the award for the Funniest and also Most Original was given to Kristi Miller and the band "Deadline", consisting of Todd Brown, Mike Kouder, Kerry McKinley, Keith Ort and Eric McKinley, composer of the group's songs, received the Best Instrumental award.

The recipients of the awards were determined by a panel of five highly qualified judges including Woodlan's own Jane Sullivan. Jim Schmidt, drama director at Heritage High School, Kelley Pierce, choreographer of Woodlan's musicals, volunteered their services, together with two area celebrities—Mike Barnard of Channel 15 and Tony Robinson from "Tony's Place" on WOWO Radio.

Todd Davis hosted the evening and added to the variety by not only introducing the acts but also by amusing the audience with jokes and humorous personal stories. The show which sold out with standing room only was a huge success.

The Speech Team had an outstanding season winning eight individual trophies and 101 ribbons with 17 of those being blue. The 16 members also combined their efforts to acquire eight team trophies. The team attended 17 meets around Indiana. The members "beat the sun up" every Saturday morning in order to begin speaking at 8:00 A.M. They often spoke into the late afternoon for ribbons and points to be recorded at the National Forensic League. Sheryl Engle, Kristi Miller, Bill Brown, Terry Bush, Cindy Clark and Kathy Mull lead the team in their accumulation of points and ribbons while Mrs. Louise Jones coached from the side.

After a great deal of hard work, dedication, late nights and early mornings, things finally paid off. Both groups had a remarkable year and had a great deal to show for it.

Clubs Seek Variety/Profit

As an alternate to a study hall, clubs caught the eye of many people with a diversified list to choose from.

The Graphic Arts Club made a variety of products, such as T-shirts, bumper stickers and tickets for experience and profit. Mr. Michael Roy sponsored the club and oversaw all projects.

The Photography Club's members used their time to learn the proper techniques of taking and developing "the perfect picture" with the assistance of Mr. Keith Pierson. The members of these two clubs learned skills that may possibly aid them in their careers or earn them a little extra money.

The Chess Club, sponsored by Mr. Alvin Waldron, increased their knowledge of a game that has been around since the 600 A.D.'s. The members developed skill, imagination, logic, as well as had a good time.

The Rocket Club learned how miniature engines worked, not only in rockets, but in small race cars. They were under the supervision of Mr. Dean Ray.

These clubs allowed students to develop skills, enjoy themselves, and profit in many ways.

Involvement Essential To Clubs

To be a member of a club doesn't mean much unless one learns to be involved. In clubs, members obtained skills in dealing with people in the community.

Students who were curious about careers in medicine were organized with Tom Adams to form the Medical careers club.

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes was an organization to provide athletes, not only with ideas of sports, but with Christian beliefs and service to the community.

For the juniors and seniors, prom is probably one of the most exciting and colorful events of the spring. The prom committee was credited with organizing decorations and the menu so that everyone might enjoy the evening.

When friends joined together to share feelings and indulge in Bible studies, the purpose of Maranatha Fellowship was fulfilled.

In all, these clubs contributed something to its members. Skills in communication and relating to others were gained through times together. Involvement in activities provide initiative for involvement in the community.

Clubs Combine Special Interests

Sponsored by Mr. John Briegel and Mr. Robert Herman, the Social Studies Club finished their 21st year with activities such as the Christmas and Spring parties and working concessions for basketball games. The club also held their notorious initiation, this year by initiating its new members with manure.

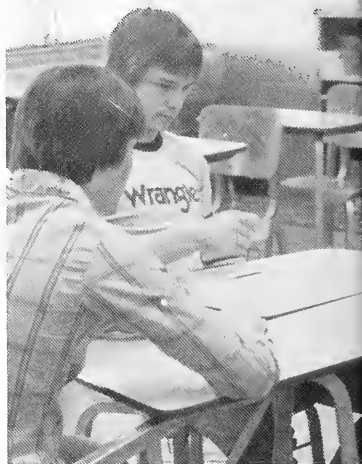

The Card Club, also sponsored by Mr. Briegel and Mr. Herman, consisted of approximately 37 members. The members of this club used their meeting times to learn the fundamentals of the games of bridge and euchre.

The German Club, headed by Mr. Steve Holt, increased its membership to 70. The participants sold advent calendars and gummi bears to raise money. Even after sponsoring ski trips, a trip to Frankenmuth, Michigan, an Oktoberfest, and an end-of-the-year banquet at the Heidelberg Cafe in Huntington, it remained the richest club. The club began a scholarship program and awarded Becky Brittingham, Trina Chapman, and Rose Carpanter $100.00 each for their outstanding achievements in their German class.

The Spanish Club, headed by Mrs. Fickle, was 31 members strong. This program has proved to be very successful with its activities. The club held its annual Christmas party with Spanish customs, and for the second year in a row, it sponsored a trip to Mexico.

New Clubs Create Big "Smash"

The Wrestling/Matmaids Club and the ski Club were new clubs, and both were a great success. The Wrestling/Matmaid Club had its restrictions as to who could join; whereas the ski club drew up an interest among many students in traveling down the treacherous slopes of Swiss Valley. The Ski Club recruited many new skiers by sponsoring a 4-day trip to Breckenridge, Colorado. Many came back with souvenirs to show, stories to tell and romances to dream about, but fortunately no one returned with injuries.

The Wrestling/Matmaids Club was a club which did its best to promote the sport of wrestling. This promotion created a great amount of support by fans. The matmaids also sold seat cushions to help send the wrestlers to state.

As the ski season came to an end, faithful skiers looked forward to hitting the slopes again. The wrestlers prepared their bodies for grueling meets ahead while the matmaids thought up new promotional gimmicks.

Wrestlers demonstrate their strength by arm wrestling.

Academics

Out in the farm country, one would think that the only subjects learned would be farming, home cooking, hunting, and sewing. Contrary to this belief, students of the "hick school" studied a wide range of subjects from analytics to zoology.

The farm flavor, however, was not lost. The ever popular agriculture classes maintained their enrollment and gave a chance to those who wanted to stay in the community to farm.

Students who wished other occupations were also given that chance.

Academic experiences were endless, giving the students a chance to "BREAK THROUGH" and become the people they wished to be.

Language: A Vital Role

Language plays a vital role in today's society. One must be able to read, write, and speak English correctly in order to function well in this country.

Nouns, verbs, adjectives, adverbs, and many other seemingly "foreign" words kept English students' minds turning over. Students also wondered how everything would finally fit into place, but it all did, and they made it through alive.

If English alone wasn't enough to "boggle one's brain," there were students who decided to study a foreign language of either German or Spanish as well. When foreign language students finally recovered from the shock of conjugation, "mixed-up" word order, "Sprechen Sie Deutsch?," and "Que Pasa?," they realized that their foreign language study had helped them to gain a better understanding of their own English language.

Students who wished to put their writing abilities to the test joined either the ARROW or the POW WOW staff. Would-be writers who thought that they wrote fairly well learned that they did have room for improvement when Ms. Jane Sullivan literally "ripped" their copy and articles apart. There were also the voices of the notorious editors, Sheryl Engle, ARROW, and C.J. Geary, POW WOW, screaming and ranting hysterically that a deadline was near.

Members of both staffs were many times running around for stories and typing so fast that they thought their fingers would fall off. Both staffs survived though, and the staff members produced two "top-notch" publications.

Social Sciences Open Doors To Understanding

From junior high to high school students were required to take social studies. Many things were learned in this area of study. A course in world history was offered. History of the United States and its important documents were studied which started with 8th graders memorizing the Gettysburg Address. Then when students reached U.S. history in the 11th grade and government as seniors, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were brought into perspective. There was even a course that studied important current events.

Social Studies also included the field of economics. 8th graders were introduced to economics through a J.A. sponsored program called "Project Business" which involved bringing area businessmen into the classroom to talk about banking, stocks and bonds, and future careers. Seniors who weren't seventh semester graduates got another taste of the concepts of economics as they tried to make sense of the goals in their lives and how to reach them.

Sociology and Psychology were two other important areas that could be studied. These courses dealt with the behavior of human beings and the societies they compose.

Finally, starting with the seventh grade students, the importance of geography was stressed.

Based on the principle that nothing strengthens a nation like learning about its past, the goal of the social sciences was to challenge students not to allow history to repeat itself.

The Gettysburg Address isn't only the name of a famous document. It's also familiar to the 8th graders as the name of an entire section of Mr. Donald Gundy's history class.

The last minute of finishing up chapter worksheets is a struggle common to Mr. William Mull's history students.

Seniors have mixed emotions as Mr. John Briegel explains how they are to take turns teaching each other the rest of the book for the final five weeks.

7th graders keep Mr. James Sharron hopping as he tries to focus their attention on world affairs.

Feature:

Teachers are people too!

Teachers exhibited as many individual differences in teaching styles as did students in learning styles. This uniqueness created a diverse atmosphere in which students learned.

Mr. Mike Roy headed the graphic arts area where the class stressed basic graphic skills. Students were introduced into a new area of design called super graphics where they could express their talents on the walls of the room; the designs brought the room to life. With Mr. Roy's animated face and the articulation of Lawrence Welk, there was always a lively atmosphere in his room.

Another very "real to life" teacher was Ms. Jane Sullivan. Being a "down to earth person," she was good in relating to the students who passed in and out of her doors. Because of her ever flowing and hectic activities, students had to frequently remind her which class she was in.

Mr. Howard Baulkey's "extraordinary use of volume" helped students grasp the skills of algebraic equations and other aspects of "new math."

Stepping into another world students became orators and actors as they walked into Mrs. Louise Jones' room. Students debated issues, persuaded opponents to their position, pretended they were bacon or Iguanas, ranted and raved and generally were able to step out of their own personalities and take on the characteristics of another person or thing.

As the teaching techniques varied from teacher to teacher, so did their personalities. The teachers were not to be feared; they were real people too — just different.

In responding to "Who is Mozart?" Mr. Mike Roy answers, "He's wonderful."

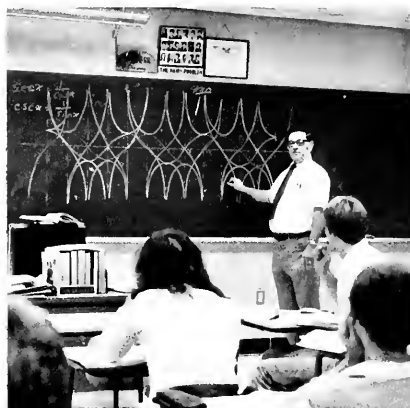

Bo Derek look out! On a scale of one to ten Ms. Jane Sullivan rates a thirteen.

Career Classes Introduce "Real" Job Problems

Vocational Courses contributed to students' opportunities before they underwent "life" in the working world. Students had first hand experience as the typed "mock" business letters in typing class and hand crafted tables in woods class. They were baffled by the complexity of copy and duplicating machines; they had to practice many safety methods in order to "keep all their fingers." Although it took a great deal of time and practice, these obstacles were overcome with the help of the fine instructors.

Students tackled such courses as typing, shorthand and bookkeeping with Mr. Joseph Bell assisting. In Office Practice students could temporarily portray secretaries with Mr. Keith Pierson playing the role of "the boss" and demonstrating the most efficient method of operating adding machines, typewriters and duplicating machines. Mr. Ray Gilbert lead instruction of recordkeeping, making payrolls and other techniques of business operations.

Industrial Arts students learned to make products out of wood and metal. They learned the safest method for operating the machines and using the tools.

The students finally could operate the various machines both in the Industrial Arts department as well as the business areas. The students will be able to use these skills as they contemplated the working world.

Challenge: A Major Element

Challenge was a major element in the study of mathematics and science.

The classes that were offered in the science field were general science, Biology I & II, advanced biology seminar, living chemistry, Chemistry I & II, physics, and eighth grade science.

The students who attended these classes dissected animals, mixed chemicals, and viewed slides through a microscope.

There were also the projects of collecting leaves and insects, making models of various elements, doing experiments, and preparing the courtyard for a new greenhouse.

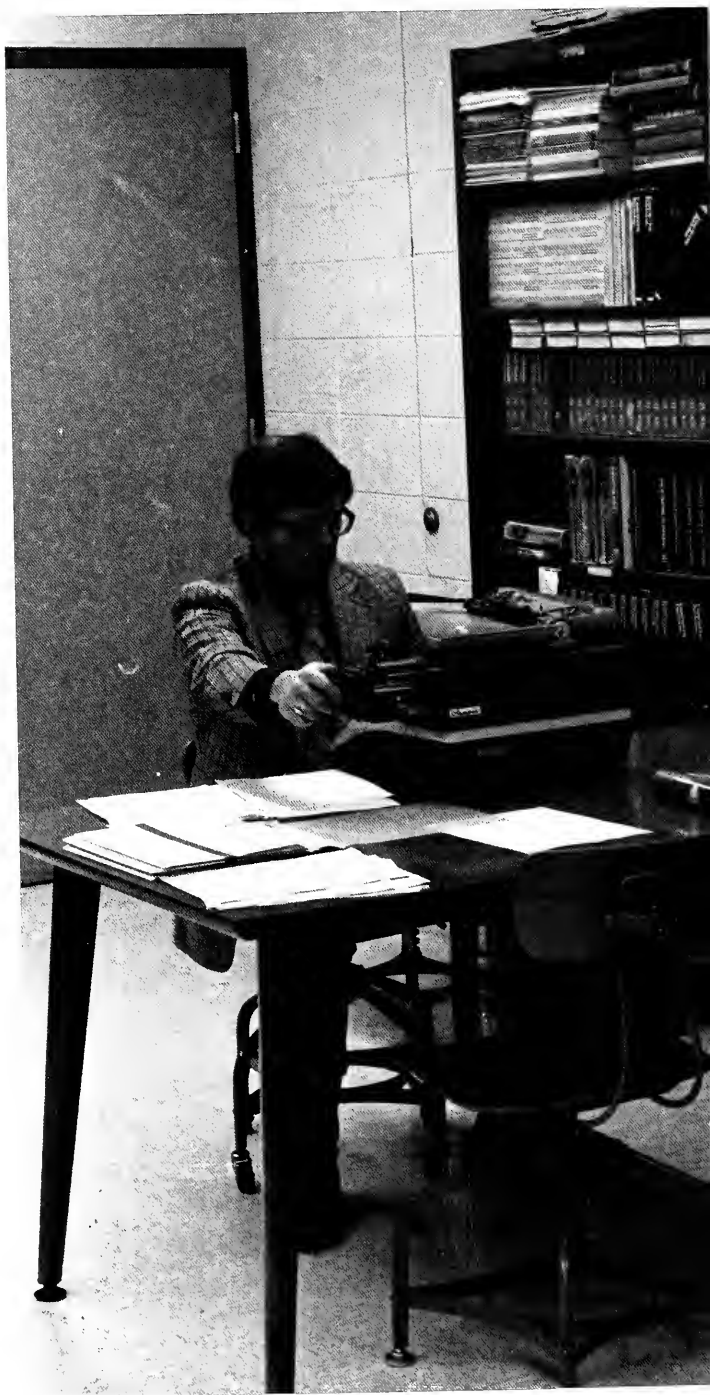

Observation was a necessary skill in science classes in order to not miss any stage of a plant or animal at growth or any chemical's reaction.

Mathematics, a subject which doesn't change in content, required junior high students to learn math fundamentals as they prepared for the higher math courses in high school.

Elective high school mathematics courses such as general math, Algebra I & II, geometry, trigonometry and analytics gave high school students the background needed for further college study.

Both the mathematics and the science courses offered, prepared their students very well for their future college courses.

Artistic Creativity Fosters "Total Awareness"

The creative arts included music, visual arts, and theatre arts classes. The students taking part in each artistic area, expressed special talents throughout the year.

Out of the National Scholastic Judging Contest, 84 were chosen to be sent to New York. Mike Fuelling, Scott Irwin, Lisa Szjana and Micky Osmun were entrants with Szjana receiving the Kodak Medallion of Excellence. Scott Irwin also had three editorial cartoons printed in the News Sentinel.

Other art projects completed by students during the year included creating unusual kites, making sundials, drawing self-portraits and studying the process of batik, photography and silversmithing.

The theatre arts class performed for the eighth grade classes, Woodburn Elementary and the second grade of Leo Elementary. During a class session in make up, students became panda bears, seals, and baboons. Other activities included practice session in the art of pantomime, improvisations, and acting in play cuttings from 16th C. Shakespeare to 20th C. Neil Simon.

Music classes taught appreciation of baroque, classical and romantic musical styles and completed the year with a study of 20th C. and pop music. High school students studied music theory on an individual level-attending concerts and reporting about them.

The arts is an area of study vital to the progress of society-without art there is no appreciation of beauty.

Teamwork: Not Only For Sports

Teamwork, a requirement in sports, also became a large factor of many classes. Home economics headed by Mrs. Julia Wilson in the high school, and Mrs. Shirley Deetz in the junior high school, undertook ambitious projects inside and outside of the classroom. Cooking projects included canning, preserving and bread making with young chefs evidenced an energetic "try-try-try again" spirit. One creative aspect of cooking included tackling international cuisine and sampling foods from Mexico to Germany.

Sewing projects allowed students to creatively produce garments which were also economically practical. Some students even turned their talents into money making projects for teachers or other students.

Health classes used teamwork in group discussion. Mr. Bill Bollier encouraged and "coached" classes into interesting "rap sessions."

With America "running into" the physical fitness scene, the gym classes exercised this fad and built up muscles and coordination while developing friendships as well. Teams sided up to participate in group sports such as basketball, volleyball and softball. Team cooperation was necessary for a victory.

When the weather turned warmer, gym classes migrated outside; however, during the time when the weather wasn't at its best, the classes intergrated to become the scene of a big square dance. Students who had never been "exposed" to dancing before, found themselves "do-si-do'ing" around the big gym.

The members of all of these classes found that the experience of working together was the most valuable skill learned.

After the patterns and sewing machines are put away, sleep seems to be the next thing in mind for Lanell Chaney and Jeanette Quinn.

Steve Frecker "sets" his team up for another point.

A hard volleyball match leads to "scanty attire" as Jon Salway and Bob Conroy "cool off."

Mr. Bill Bollier amuses his class with yet another anecdote.

Sports

It has been said that farm people get their strength from lifting bales of hay. Whatever the reason, strength and stamina played a large part in the sport's seasons.

Football, wrestling, basketball, track, and cross country were only a few of the sports recognized for excellence. These teams gained recognition through hard work, not only noticed by schools of a much larger population, but also backed by fans of the surrounding area.

These accomplishments proved once again that the "hick school" was "BREAKING THROUGH" to the attention of many.

Warriors Tackle All But Two

The 1980 football season was a challenge met victoriously. The Warriors presented a respectable record — 8 wins 2 losses. The only defeats were against excellent teams, Norwell and New Haven.

With most of the team being returning letterman, the Warriors had the experience. Mike Hetrick led the team in scoring — 9 TD's 54 points and came in second in rushing 623 yards. Devin Anderson also played a major role on offense with 4 TD's 24 points and led the team in rushing 667 yards. The backfield was definitely balanced. Todd Davis led the team as quarterback. Todd's speed played a big role, but the threat to throw the ball always kept the defense on edge.

Warrior defense was led by line-backer Greg Diehm. Greg led the team in most tackles 95. Jeff Berning was also a major defensive player; he contributed 59 tackles. The result in most of the defensive damage was done by our outstanding tackles Jon Gerardot and Steve Frecker making the action happen.

The Warriors had six men selected to the All Conference team. They were Todd Davis, Mike Hetrick, Devin Anderson, Craig Bontrager, Greg Diehm and Steve Frecker. Honorable mentions went to Scott Thompson and Jeff Berning.

The Warriors definitely had a season to be proud of. The crowd and the cheerleaders were a great support to the dedicated men on the field. As the season came to an end respects were paid to those graduating seniors with recognition night at the last home game. In all we will miss them, but as coach Etzler would say, "Start counting the days to next year."

Scott Thompson gives a vicious hit on the tacklematic during a grueling Warrior practice.

Rising Stars Set High Goals

The Reserve Football team ended its season with an even 500-4 wins and 4 losses. Although it was a very rewarding year, it also had its frustrations. This squad missed the size and speed of past years, but they had the desire to win. J.V. players prepared themselves for next years varsity spots, recognizing the key words to success as being: hustle, hard work, and determination. As Coach Bollier put it, "Preparing yourself mentally and physically make putting on the Blue Jersey where its all at."

The Freshman Football team ended their season with a commendable record of 7

wins and 1 loss. The season as always in Freshman football, was built around fundamentals and preparation for for upcoming years. The team's strength came from their passing game and teamwork. The experience the men gained was valuable, but as Coach Lehrman put it, The thrill of interscholastic competition, success and failure with your teammates, is something you'll never forget."

The Junior High Football teams also did well. The seventh grade finished with 2 wins and a tie, and the eighth grade had the thrill of victory twice.

Runners Stride 60 Miles/Week To Reach Goals

Even though they ran at least sixty miles per week as practice, the cross country team ran into a very tough season. The handicap of a very young team and not having the summer training to compete against the strong competition in this area cost them every meet they ran.

Out of only seven runners, sophomore Neal Lengacher proved the most valuable, and he paced the team all season. Senior Trina Chapman, the team's only female runner, proved that women can stand up to the grueling pace as well as the men can.

Even though it was a long, hard run for our striders, many personal goals were met, and everyone improved at least a small amount.

Setters/Spikers Bump Into Trying Season

The boys' Varsity Volleyball team finished fairly well. They ended with an 8-9 record at the end of the season, including tournaments. Coach Gay Martin said that one of the team's biggest problems was the lack of experience. The guys played some very tough teams such as Harding, Heritage, and Westville, all of which had many returning players as well as returning lettermen.

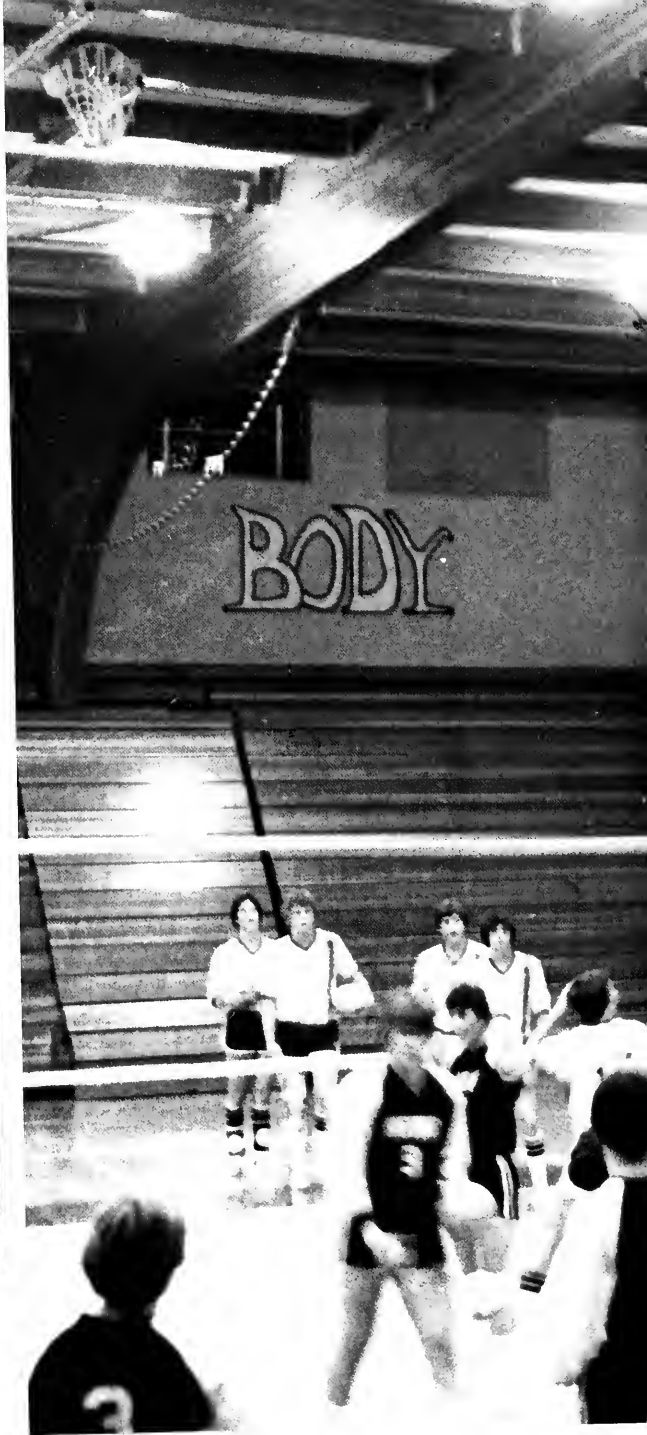

Said Coach Martin, "I think that the team worked very well together. Volleyball is more of a team sport than either basketball or football. It's more fast moving, and if one person is out of position we could lose one or more points. In basketball or football, however, one man can be slightly out of place and the team can compensate for it fairly easily."

Through all of the rough times, the team fared well. Two juniors, Rick Gerig and Todd Wiedemann, were named honorable mention on the All Conference team, and the team itself finished fifth in the state.

Girls "Set Up" For Tough Opponents

As the net loomed high between them, two teams stood facing to pit their volleyball skills against each other. Six starters on a 12-girl squad battled strong odds during the 1980 season.

A rebuilding year for the girls volleyball proved evident, as they lost their six senior starters and had only one senior returning among a very young squad. Coach Norma Gilbert led her warrior ladies to a 4-11 record. According to Gilbert, all the girls exhibited fairly equal playing skills. As one player stated, "I think the whole team would agree, we started out slowly. As the season progressed we learned to work together as a team, and we played much better volleyball."

With a squad of mostly sophomores and juniors, next year's season looks very promising with a young yet experienced team.

Teamwork/A New Concept For Youth

Junior High girls J.V. did an exceptional job, defeating all their opponents. The Varsity girls had a rather disappointing season, however, with a record of 2 in 6.

Kelly Lothamer, their coach, explained, "As soon as the girls realized that the only way they were going to win any games was to work together as a team, they all started looking sharp."

The 8th grade girls basketball team had many exceptional players. All of them put forth much effort during the season and the tournament. The 7th grade girls gained experience as they learned how to be aggressive and learned never to give up. Neither team had a very successful season, but there are high hopes for next year.

Playing and competing on teams provided a new learning experience for most of these young girls. They learned about their game and gained respect of their coaches, but most importantly they learned about themselves. As a player put it, "Just one of the things I learned was how to control my temper ... somewhat."

Teamwork/Growth Prove Successful

In the past, student spirit during basketball season rated about 65 percent involvement, but last season surpassed 100 percent. In the Blue Pit, the crowd, representing the "sixth man on the floor," cheered and gave standing ovations which awed opponents.

In a family atmosphere, team members supported each other-celebrating victories and accepting defeats. Teamwork consisted of players on the floor and of the potential of the bench.

Games consisted mostly of key conference bouts. The first conference win against Leo set the Warriors on the right track in ACAC standings.

The next challenge came against top rated Carroll. In a game filled with adrenaline, the pride of the student body emerged as the "sixth man on the floor" and once again brought the house down with standing room only.

The ACAC tourney gave the thrill of being in the final game and the experience of playing in the coliseum. The third quarter against the Knights was the downfall to victory lane. The Warriors were out-shot and out-scored, but the sportsmanship kept the boys poised throughout the play.

In the sectional play it was a rematch against Harding. The Hawks started off with the fast offensive charge that they were known for. The Warriors worked hard in a defensive surge to keep in the game.

The success of "Martin's Machine" came from a theory of 4-7-52-four hours a day, seven days a week, and fifty-two weeks a year.

The Junior Varsity squad that pushed the varsity team to its success deserved recognition. Although the overall season had its ups and downs, players such as John Hans and Todd Gerbers moved up to varsity potential from the playing time they received on the JV level.

The lack of key players played a role in the offensive attack while the well-executed defense improved throughout the season.

The reserve level, often the stepping stone to varsity success, challenged players as they successfully realized their potentials.

Offensive Charge/Defensive "Man-To-Man" — A Winning Combination

The girls basketball team presented a very forward looking season. The experience was there but lacked in a few minor places, such as learning to work together at the start of the season. Once that was accomplished the unity could not be beat anywhere. The season as a whole had its ups and downs, but they pulled it all together for the ACAC tourney. The girls took the first game with little difficulty against Churubusco, which advanced them on to the semi-finals. This game brought out the old "Leo-vs-Woodlan" rivalry. The tension was high throughout the entire game, but the Leo girls were just too much to handle.

The teams overall season record came to 5-13. The girls were close in almost all of the games. In conference play they went three and three.

The offensive attack kept the girls in the game at all times. The team difinately had the abily to score. Leading the charge was Anita Huff who put the key points on the board when they were most needed. These points gelled together quickly and kept the team strong throughout the season.

The defensive surge was best at the "Man-to-Man." With all the hustle and determination it was better expressed as "Warrior Pride."

The team has projected optimism for next year with the varsity team only loosing one senior. The girls returning will have the experience needed to posses the victory triumph.

The reserve squad had a trying but learn-ing season. With most of the team being freshman, they laid the foundation for stepping up to the varsity level. The most out-standing freshman was to be Holly Hirsch. She moved into a starting position on the varsity team in only a few weeks. As the season closed the reserves also began to look to next year with optimism for successes in the future.

Jr. High/Frosh Shoot Toward Varsity

Deep from the corners of the Jr. High halls emerged the courageous contenders that composed the 7th-8th grade basketball teams.

Roundballers on the 7th grade team set the highest season record with 12 wins and 2 losses. Height, talent, and hard-working attitudes carried the team into the final game of the ACAC with an unfortunate shot at the buzzer. The 7th grade Warriors lost to Norwell, 22-20.

The 8th grade team showed much improvement over the season, but also lost the ACAC to Norwell, 28-21, in a close game. With a sigh, they closed the season, 7-7 split.

Coached by Charlie Hissong, the freshmen basketballers paced their record with six wins and four close losses. The overall record for the season was 6-9. Improvement also shined in the freshmen, preparing them for future basketball.

Grapplers "Wrestle" Season's Challenges

With bodies twisted, arms and legs entangled, often was hard to tell who was who during a match.

The Warrior grapplers saw their share of ups and downs during their 5-6 season, and many wrestlers accomplished personal goals they set to conquer. Rod Fry achieved the best individual record with a 16-4 finish. Barry Ehle broke through with a 17-6 record, followed by Mark Pusey; 16-6. Dennis DeFreese was next with a 14-7-1, and Chip Rademacher; 13-8-2, and also breaking a school record, with a 20-second pin.

Highlighting the season was the Wrestling Invitational. Barry Ehle and Mark Pusey reigned victorious in their own weight classed with Woodlan placing 4th in overall competition. In the ACAC, Warriors walked away with a 3rd place, and Rod Fry was named to All-Conference for placing 1st in the 185 lb. weight class.

Personal effort proved that a small school could shine in the face of a tough season.

"Putting in the miles"

The one thing all athletes had in common was the miles they amassed in training for and performing in their chosen sport. Ranging from the basketball court to the fairway at Pond-O-River, the athletes ran on many types of ground surfaces.

As the athletes who initiated the sport season, the football players found muscles which had been dormant for many months. They participated in two practices per day — early morning and late afternoon. Between running for conditioning and "running the tires," the team logged over three miles per day. Football was a game of inches and over a complete season those inches turned into miles.

Dotting the scenery along the country side, the cross country team began the arduous task of building endurance. Initially the training was a surprise of agony to muscles grown flaccid over the summer. Soon covering the miles came easily to runners, and the team ultimately put in many miles in just a few months. The self-satisfaction and physical exhilaration of getting out and running every day was what attracted runners to the cross country team.

As the winter season opened, the basketball and volleyball teams hit the courts. The familiar sound of basketballs echoing with every bounce and the loud booms from vicious volleyball spikes struck the courts once again. The basketball "family" covered much ground with constant jumping and running down the courts for a "fast break." The setters and spikers took much wear and tear from charging the net and leaping great heights to "block that spike."

Adding to the variety of athletics offered each year two groups used a different surface—the mats of gymnastics and wrestling. Gymnasts ran and leaped across the mats as they learned grace and agility in performing routines and exercises. Meanwhile all the young grapplers jogged for approximately 15 minutes each night before they hit the mats to improve their wrestling skills and techniques.

As the weather warmed and signs of spring approached, baseball, golf, and track squads went into training. Starting in February baseball players began conditioning in the gymnasium. Pitchers ran at least two miles per day in early training to assure themselves of strong legs. During games, batters were required to sprint around bases; therefore, they needed to be in top running conditioning also.

Chip shot, divits, and sliced balls were adjectives used by the golf team. The 18 holes of golf courses required golfers to walk three miles per meet. Hampered by very rainy and wet courses, this activity proved to be challenging. The season demanded dedication and self-discipline, golfers had to shoot their best scores to help the team in final standings.

The men and women track teams were comprised of sprinters, milers, long jumpers and field positions. Fighting blisters and shin splints, the teams ran three to five miles daily in preparation for their first meets. With a goal of qualifying for sectionals and regionals, sprinters and long jumpers tore up the asphalt with their spikes and blazing speed.

The usually warm sun was replaced by the cold and rain. Meets and games for the spring sports were cancelled and postponed all through the season.

As the school year ended, the athletic fields and arenas were left barren and empty, and the groans, moans, and cheers of the fans were left to echoing chambers of silence.

Waiting for the opportunity to break out to the lead, runners pace themselves, in hope of a spectacular finish.

Gymnastics: More Than Just "Routine"

Gaining control of muscles and coordinating this with graceful tactics, confidence emanated from the lady warriors' gymnastic meets.

The girls displayed fantastic talent and coordination on the mats, vault, uneven parallel bars, and the beam. Muscle control and coordination was not enough for a successful performance. The long, trying practices and self discipline provided background for mental concentration and a fine showing at the meets.

Because the team was too small to compete on a team basis, team members entered events on an individual level. It was a building year for the varsity team. However, in the junior high a new team was built. The junior high members did very well and won all but one of their meets. Monica Zelt showed leadership in directing the junior high team to their victories.

Meanwhile the varsity team operated very well. Several gymnasts walked away with the blue ribbons during the season. Becky Brittingham was named the most valuable player.

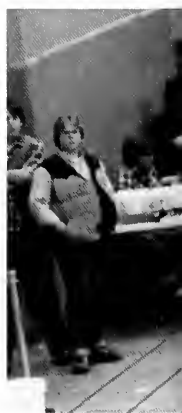

As the mats were folded up and pushed into storage, and the beam and uneven parallel bars were set aside, confidence was gained as the most important factor of the meets.

Balance is a challenge met with triumph by Heidi Wietfeldt on the uneven bars.

Bright Future Coming — Never Second Again!

Twenty girls in cold gray sweats,
Circle the track that's slick and wet,
The high bar rattles, the discus spins,
The sprinters test their battered shins.
The hurdlers fly and touch the ground;
The milers stride in silent sound
The shot putters heave the metal ball,
While others stretch against the wall.
The coach observes in quiet awe,
Carefully checking for technical flaw.
She blows her whistle to call her team,
Her super athletes — a coach's dream
The looks of pride on determined faces.
The winners of Woodlan are going places.
On May the fourth within Norwell's dormain,
The first conference title — Warriors will gain.
A bright future is coming; the past has been.
Winners of Woodlan — never second again!

Records Set As Team Overcomes Obstacles

In the spring months, when all the football gear was packed away and the basketballs went through the hoop for the last time, athletes found their muscles itching to be indulged in another sport.

Sprinters and hurdlers couldn't wait to be outside. Adorned in their favorite "Nike" and "Adidas" running shoes, sweat socks and warm-up suits, members of the track team prepared to run the best season possible.

Comprised of many returning lettermen, the boys' track team looked forward to a full season ahead of them. Overcoming more obstacles than just hurdles and bad weather, the boys conquered sore muscles and shin splints to set new school records and accumulated many ribbons. Todd Davis and Devin Anderson "ran over" the old records and established new and more concise times, with Todd Davis slashing the old 100m. dash record of 11.2 to 11.1. In the 400m. relay, the Warrior four; Todd Davis, Devin Anderson, Ron Kashner, and Keith Delegrange broke yet another record making the new time 45.2. Finishing fourth in the conference was also an accomplishment the team was proud of.

The thrill of accomplishment applied to the runners as they passed the finish line in great strides.

Rounding the final corner alone, Devin Anderson had "run ahead" of all his competition.

Young Racers Win 'Em All!

Together for the first time on the athletic field, the junior high track team combined forces to produce one of the best junior high teams in its history.

Members of the junior high track team battled obstacles never put in front of them before, hurdles seemed like great "mountains" and the long jump sand pit seemed like trying to cross the Sahara Desert. Running the relays marked miles of endless laps around the track.

According to Gary Richhart, the head coach of the junior high boys, the season went exceptionally well. The boys ended up with second place in the A.C.A.C. tourney. "The junior high deserved first place for their first place effort," stated Richhart.

The junior high track team showed much enthusiasm for competition in the meets. The spirit and talent of the young team will take them far into their high school years.

Bats/Clubs "Swing" With Enthusiasm

As the baseball bats cracked and the mighty swing of the golf clubs "followed through," baseball, hot dogs, apple pie and golf clubs dominated the spring scene.

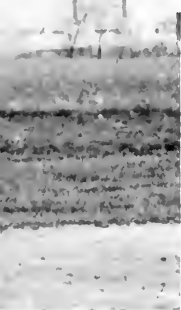

Expressions such as "Hey batter," "Fore" and "Where did the *#! ball go?" rang through the spring air. Baseball games and golf matches battled the elements sometimes losing out to the rain. When the sun did manage to peek through the clouds, the games were played without fail.

In the field of baseball, Barry Ehle and Mark Anderson ran away with the highest batting averages. During the course of the golf matches, Doug Bowers often snatched the title of medalist, having the lowest score.

Both baseball and golf teams showed immense talent and depth. The baseball team was a young team and showed great promise for the future despite the slow start at the beginning of the season. The golf team was young, but, without a doubt, it was one of the best ever in the history of the school.

Regardless of their records, both the baseball and golf teams "broke through" with a vast amount of athletic spirit. The performance by the spring teams reflected the skill and attitudes which was way above par, or rather below par in golf terms.

With a mighty swing, Mark Hoepfner tees off for another hole-in-one.

Cheerleading: More Than Leading Cheers

Approximately 10 girls on each cheerleading squad led the Warriors and fans at each game as well as captured the sportsmanship flag at the ACAC tourney for the second year in a row.

Many people didn't realize that being a cheerleader required more than just having a loud voice, pep, and gymnastic ability. The job also required dedication, creativity, and leadership abilities. These skills "paid off" for the Varsity squads who received awards at summer camp and contests at Glenbrook Mall, placing second and third, and Southtown Mall, placing third and fourth. These awards and the many dedicated hours spent in preparation refuted the misconception that cheerleading was more than just "leading cheers."

People

Walls, ceilings, rooms, desks, and blackboards were not the only things that made up the foundation of the school, but also the people who populated it. This population, consisting of many differing personalities and lifestyles, survived through the joys of sports' events, parties, ten o'clock break, and friends and also the agonies of tests, "cafeteria lunches," and late passes.

Nervous seventh graders began the year, as they searched for classes and learned a different format from that of elementary school. Eighth graders used valuable time searching for insects and "boring" trees, while freshmen looked toward responsibilities of high school. Sophomores received drivers' licenses and dreamed of "Trans Am's" and "Z 28's" while Juniors were also dreaming but of graduation "only one year away." Seniors were not unusual as thoughts of college or facing the "real world" began.

Many students experienced these typical events in high school life but individual situations were also taking place.

People of the "hick school" showed larger schools that talent and skill did not have to go with a large community.

Teamwork and Sportsmanship along with a great deal of pride gave the school and its students a "break through" to remember.

FEATURE: First date not what it's made out to be

When Barbie dolls are wrapped in tissue paper, and toy trucks are stuffed into attic boxes, children begin growing up into blemishes, Noxzema, rock and roll, high school and first dates.

Adolescents encounter various unique experiences on the first date. Initiation into dating the opposite sex often proves to be an exciting, yet nerve racking event. Examples of a first date can be as casual as going to a movie and McDonalds or as formal as an invitation to the prom. In either case, the first date is nervous.

Girls spend hours choosing a zingy outfit so as to make a spectacular first impression. Amid the aroma of perfume and the bustle of preparation, females experience nervousness and butterflies as they wait for "the date" to arrive. On the other hand, boys tend to have sweaty palms about the situation. Instead of worrying so much about outward appearances, males worry more about where the date would like to go and, more importantly, how much it'll cost.

Complications of the first date syndrome occur as soon as the date arrives to pick up the girl. The boy's nerves are taut as he confronts the girl's parents for the first time. There is always that remote possibility of parental disapproval. Another awkward moment occurs when the couple realizes that she has dressed up for the date, and he has merely worn jeans.

Just for a moment, let's imagine that perfect first date through the eyes of the individuals.

As the light turned green and the car sputtered and started to roll, the first-daters sat in utter silence as they drove through town. The tension increased as the lack of conversation "hung heavily in the air." Trying to improve the silence, the girl attempted to brighten up the conversation with a scintillating comment about the weather, stumbling over the words and sticking her foot in her mouth.

The boy, feeling equally uneasy, asked if she would like to "catch" the latest movie and a Big Mac afterward. By the time the movie started, the popcorn was long gone; awkward feelings once again arose as each of them wondered what the other was thinking. Should they move closer? Should they hold hands? These and other thoughts of first-date problems flooded their minds.

As a result of a hard day at school, the girl felt sleepy, and halfway through the movie she closed her eyes for a minute. The next thing she knew the movie was over, and her date was shaking her awake as the rest of the theatre filed out. Deeply embarrassed, she apologized for falling asleep. To cover her embarrassment, she quickly asked her date if he'd like to grab a Big Mac. At MacDonald's the couple felt uneasy as they thought the other was watching every move they made. The boy reached over to snatch the salt shaker for his fries, spilling his root beer in the process. Breaking into laughter over the mess, the girl giggled, "There, now we're equal."

After this "ice breaker" the first-daters felt a little more at ease with each other on the way home; they were now able to talk like old friends. When they arrived in the girl's driveway, she invited him into the house. Remembering the parent's congeniality, he thought this was a good idea. As soon as he stepped out of his car, the girl's monster of an animal, commonly called a dog, lapped at the boy almost knocking him over. Attempting to maintain his macho image, he suppressed a scream as he ran into the house. Again the girl laughed as she approached her door, calmly petting her docile pooch.

When a favorite TV show, "Saturday Night Live" began, the boy hinted, "Wouldn't the atmosphere be a little better if I hit the lights?". "Good idea," replied the girl. The boy, not trying to be a comedian, indeed, hit the lights. Diving to retrieve the lamp, the girl caught it and smiled broadly. "You have one over me now," she laughed.

After the show was over, the boy had to leave. Both first-daters wondered, "Will I get that good-night kiss?" Suddenly the boy reached over and shyly kissed his date, slammed the door, and ran to his car.

In a daze, the girl sat on her couch trying to remember all of the feelings which had been ignited during the course of the evening. The awkwardness had been worth it when she realized he had been as nervous as she.

"For everything there is a time and a season," and fortunately the awkwardness of the first date recedes to a "thing of the past" as once did Barbie dolls and toy trucks.

Seniors "Break Out" Into "Real World"

In the age of the energy shortages, ever-increasing inflation, unemployment, and the draft registration, seniors broke through barriers making their lives the best they could be. Temporarily leaving their everyday problems behind, they enjoyed themselves during the sports games, homecoming week and other extra-curricular activities.

The "ultimate year" had arrived, and many things made it worth the wait. The basketball team played in the A.C.A.C. championship game; seniors participated in not only sports but in swing choir, THE CRUCIBLE, PIPPIN, F.F.A. and F.H.A. They received national awards such as scholarships, and many were honored in WHO'S WHO AMONG AMERICAN HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS. Seniors had the opportunity to learn what it is really like to apply for college and "experience" government.

The Class of '81 survived the "senioritis" that hit many at the semester. Even though they looked forward to graduation, the Class of '81 wondered how they would handle the real world.

Peddlers Go Coast To Coast

While others donned swimming suits last summer, Kyle Farmer peddled his bicycle. Composed of sixty-five hopefuls, "Wandering Wheels," a Christian organization, began its 21st coast to coast bike tour.

Confidence paved the road which the riders hoped to cover in the 2800-mile trip. With their wheels in the Pacific at San Diego, the group was determined to place their front wheels in the Atlantic one month later.

During their trip, the group had to deal with the heat of the desert, the mountains, and the food poisoning which struck all but seven of the riders. Kyle fell into this group.

Despite obstacles, "Wandering Wheels," finished their trip as they arrived in Jacksonville, Florida at the Atlantic Ocean.

As the sun set and others put away suntan lotion and hung beach towels out to dry, Kyle set his bike to rest. Memories remained vivid, as daydreams reign in anticipation of next year's trip.

Juniors Set Goals

The class of "82" looked at their junior year as being one step closer to the top. To raise money for the junior prom the class of "82" set a record sales of $8,211.82 through magazine sales.

The juniors also got into the swing of becoming seniors by roaming the halls observing seniors in an attempt to find the ultimate answer to everything ... "No comment."

Performing at the Octoberfest, Jane Unsicker, Kathi York, and Joan Unsicker humorously entertain the German Club.

Never Boring

Sophomores operated as the "in between" group—still underclassmen yet the "upper" lower classmen. Becoming a sophomore entitled one to order a class ring (one's own creation) and possibly to earn a letter jacket.

One month after they turned the "magic" age of 16, they also became maniacs of the "driving world."

Boring did not describe the class of 1983. The traditional "boredom" was still around, but on the inside, these students matured and prepared themselves for the future.

Cornered at the lockers, Jeff Hoepfner listens with amazement to classmates' version of the English mid-term.

Sporting a variety of hat types, Jim O'Keefe, Dawne Shoemaker, and Tim Tracey participate in Hat Day during Spirit Week.

Frosh Hit Middle Spot

The ninth grade—a "different" place to be—placed in the book of life with students halfway through and trying to guess the end.

Freshmen faced new responsibilities, and the 10:00 break offered a new reward allowing them to relax. New faces appeared on the scene, as parochial kids invaded and allowed students to make new friendships and renew old ones.

The class of "84" proved the middle of the book can be as interesting as the first and last.

Relaxing in the library, Tony Spieth "researches" Hot Rod magazine for the latest data update about the world of cars.

Moving Up

"Moving up!" was one of the expressions used by the 8th grade students. While in the hustle and bustle of insect collecting and learning the Gettysburg Address, there was the anticipation of the 9th Grade. There were also thoughts of new classes — How hard would they be? What would the teachers be like? How much homework?

The 8th grade students looked forward to the year ending and "starting over" again in the 9th grade with its fun times, new friends, and the joy of finally being in high school.

Time Flies By

We sure did have our problems—Remember the hallways that appeared to be a maze; remember the lockers that wouldn't open even when we remembered the combination? We even had problems finding time to goof off. With no recesses anymore and a noon that flew by so quickly that there was very little free time, the days flew by until we suddenly found ourselves 8th graders before we'd become used to the 7th grade.

On their spare time Judy Webster and Becky Cook practice for an approaching concert.

Diversities Complement Styles

Amid the early morning yawns, teachers gathered in the lounge to wake up over a cup of coffee or a coke. Some teachers said little, others rehashed the game of the night before, and still others giggled over editorial cartoons.

United by common denominators of roll call, books, lesson plans, reports, projects, meetings, papers, grades, and unique students, the teachers exhibited diversities which complemented one another. As diverse in teaching styles as in personalities, teachers handled their individual areas of expertise with enthusiasm and creativity.

The enthusiasm and creativity of the teachers was possible only because of their love of teaching young people and respect for a profession which demands as much as it rewards.

Smiling happily and donned in golfing gear, Bill Mull pushes aside thoughts of grading history tests and packs up his clubs to relax on the golf course.

"Let's See If We Can Solve The Problem."

Just as ingredients in a recipe and puzzle pieces contribute to the whole, the administration contributed to the entire perspective of the school community. The administration was responsible for maintaining smooth school management — from juggling schedules of students to seeing that the physical plant ran smoothly.

Management positions delegate responsibility and authority. As in the past the maintenance crew, cafeteria workers and teachers were responsible for the management of specific areas. Heeding the cry from the student body for more involvement in school affairs, the administration allocated more duties and responsibilities to the student government. Success of this experiment produced positive feedback.

As "success breeds success," the administration felt the atmosphere of the school changed from one of "why bother" to one of "let's see if we can solve the problem" as students and teachers sought to create a positive learning environment.

Administrative personnel worked long hours, sometimes odd hours, in an effort to help the school atmosphere grow toward creating one in which learning could be fun.

Ads

Supporting a yearbook became the main concern for the staff throughout the fall and winter months. Selling ads to community businesses proved to be enlightening as well as often disheartening.

Area proprietors became the sole income of the yearbook and supported many new sections such as color pages, spot color, and experiments in feature stories. Although inflation played a large part in ad sales, local businesses were appreciated for support and encouragement not only during the campaign but also throughout the entire year.

Congratulations to the Woodlan High School Class of '81

... "What people say you cannot do, you try and find that you can."

These words, by Henry David Thoreau, aptly express our confidence and trust in the youth of today. . .
. . . for they are the leaders of our tomorrows.

"Shake-ups" Cool

For the 21st year, head basketball coach, Gay Martin joined the carnival circuit of ferris wheels, midway booths, pony rides, cotton candy and "Shake Ups." From the traditional "lemonade stand-5¢ per cup," Martin has developed the concept into a lucrative summer business.

The "Martin Lemonade Shake Up" (a lemon, ice water, sugar and ice cube concoction) cooled the thousands of carnival goers over a three-state circuit where Martin and his family "played" nine carnivals. The operation was a "family affair" with Martin's wife and four children supplying the man power.

In addition to quenching the thirst of fair goers, Martin provided merry-go-round and ferris wheel rides as well as a team of ponies for pony rides. The ponies' names and personalities suited each of them individually. The most unusual name was Mail Carrier, and the most active ponies were Rusty and Dusty who did a team act with a covered wagon.

Courtyard A Bloom

For the second year, Don Myers continued to turn dirt and seeds into lush green plants in the courtyard where he spent many hours enhancing the landscaping in order to see the courtyard "used-not just looked at through windows." to that end he planted a large variety of flowering plants and trees, such as sunflowers, marigolds, cannas, redbud, dogwood, and fruit trees. Myers' efforts created a profusion of color which agreeably improved the view.

Anticipating the completion of the planned greenhouse, Myers, said, "It's been a long time getting here; I'm really excited about having it to use." He plans to grow plants to sell-the proceeds to go toward maintenance of the greenhouse.

Since plants live and respond to electrical stimuli, Myers has always felt that plants must be treated like "you'd like to be treated yourself." One of his favorite plants-the Crown of Thorns-has an historical background. The Crown of Thorns, which was used to make Christ's head crown, originally bore white blooms; since the crucifixion, it has bloomed in red.

Although Myers has easily evidenced his green thumb talents, he recommends the Jade Plant to novice growers-"you'd have to really work hard to kill it."

Contemplating her summer job with Apple Tree dinner Theater, Jane Sullivan believes that being allows a person to create a story out of the make believe.

The End Or The Beginning?

The story of the "hick school," a never ending one, finally terminated for a year. Moments of success in sports and academics and memories of classes, friends, and special experiences were all tucked away in drawers to be enjoyed at a later date.

Size of school, never became a factor when students recalled winning various sports' awards, producing and presenting difficult dramatic and musical shows, and having cheerleaders who raised the spirit of spectators to the point of award winning recognition and raised an attitude of "winner" in the players.

Size never mattered to the students of the "hick school;" it only made the accomplishments more impressive to those of a larger population.

The "hick school" was finally
BREAKING THROUGH!
